

PRESS RELEASE:

Failure Free Reading Receives Top Rating in the National Center on Response to Intervention's New Instructional Tools Chart

2011 Concord, NC: Failure Free Reading was just informed by the National Center on Response to Intervention that it has received for the second year in a row their highest rating of all commercially available RTI Tier II and Tier III interventions for middle and high school students.

This was no easy accomplishment.

The National Center on Response to Intervention established a standard process to evaluate the scientific rigor of commercially available tools and interventions that can be used in an RTI context.

The reviews were conducted by a Technical Review Committee (TRC) made up of national experts. Together they have developed rigorous evidence standards to guide the review process.

All submitters of tools were evaluated based on these standards.

The RTI review process lasted over a full year.

You can try other RTI solutions, but why do that when you have the opportunity to give your staff and your students access to the best RTI solution for $100?
